MARK SCHNEIDER TIMELINE (1970-77)
Prepared by Mark D. Nevin
Miller Center, University of Virginia, 11/21/2008

1963  Mark Schneider graduates from University of California at Berkeley with a degree in journalism. http://peacecorpsonline.org/

1964-5  Schneider earns a Masters degree in political science from San Jose State. http://peacecorpsonline.org/

1966-8  Schneider and his wife Susan serve in the Peace Corps in El Salvador. He calls it the “most illuminating, rewarding and exhausting period of my life.” http://peacecorpsonline.org/

November  Republican Richard M. Nixon is elected president. Democrats retain control of both the House and Senate.

1969  EMK is named chairman of the Judiciary Subcommittee on Administrative Practice and Procedure (AdPrac).

EMK joins the military committee of the NATO inter-parliamentary organization, the North Atlantic Treaty Assembly, and begins to educate himself about military issues that come before the committee. (Theodore Lippman, Jr., Senator Ted Kennedy, New York: W.W. Norton & Co., 1976, p. 193)

1970  Schneider joins EMK’s Senate office staff as a legislative assistant. (Note that Schneider is hired through the AdPrac subcommittee and, accordingly, the Congressional Staff Directories in some years also formally include Schneider on the AdPrac staff as an investigator.) Schneider initially serves as a “jack-of-all-trades,” whose portfolio includes the military, arms control, energy, amnesty, migrant workers, human rights, and Latin America. (Lippman, p. 265)

Schneider organizes AdPrac hearings on draft reform. The committee issues a report to serve as a “blueprint for action by the [Nixon] administration” for reforming the nation’s draft laws and restructuring the Selective Service System. Among other things, the report calls for the elimination of most deferments and uniform, national standards for induction into the armed services. (1970 CQ Almanac, p. 413)

Feb/March  EMK’s AdPrac Subcommittee holds amnesty hearings for draft dodgers and military deserters. EMK supports amnesty but, according to Lippman, introduces no legislation in 1972 because of amnesty’s widespread unpopularity. EMK aides, such as Dun Gifford, had been pushing EMK to support amnesty since 1968, when Gifford convinced EMK to include in an early draft reform proposal a recommendation that the DOD and attorney general study the history of amnesty. EMK had agreed and subsequently drew much criticism from the media in 1968. (1972 CQ Almanac, p. 481; Lippman, p. 84)

July
At the Democratic National Convention, EMK declines an offer to serve as presidential nominee George McGovern’s running-mate in the 1972 election. (Clymer, pp. 187-191)

August
EMK uses his chairmanship of the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Refugees to hold hearings on the impact of the Vietnam War on the civilian population, particularly children. (1972 CQ Almanac, p. 766)

EMK strongly supports a bill (S 3762) to extend family health services to migrant workers. The bill, passed by voice vote, authorizes more than $350 million over three years for health and hospital care for migrant agricultural workers and their families. During floor debate, EMK says: “Today with the migrant health programs we have on the books, we are providing health services for fewer than 10 percent of the migrant workers… in spite of the fact that their health needs…are among the most critical in the country.” EMK later offers an amendment to combine the migrant worker health care bill and three other health bills to a hospital construction bill (S 3716). The bills are combined and win approval 78 to 0 in September. (1972 CQ Almanac, pp. 528, 530)

November
EMK and Joan Kennedy travel with Schneider to Bonn to attend a NATO meeting. During the trip, EMK has dinner with John Hume, an Irish civil rights leader, to gain a better first-hand understanding of the Irish conflict. (Clymer, p. 183)

January
The Paris Peace Accords are signed formally ending the Vietnam War. A few months later American combat troops leave Vietnam, but the U.S. continues to support South Vietnam and bomb Cambodia.

May
EMK travels to NATO in Belgium with Schneider.

OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) imposes an oil embargo on the U.S. after it re-supplies Israel during the Arab-Israeli War.

September
The Chilean military overthrows democratically elected president Salvador Allende’s leftist government. The Nixon administration, which had actively opposed Allende, quickly recognizes the new military junta despite the death of Allende in the coup and the killing of thousands of other Chileans. EMK, who had become interested with Chile’s democratic history after he and Joan travelled there for a belated honeymoon in 1959, issues a statement against the coup and opposes U.S. aid to the new regime. He holds hearings a few weeks after the coup on refugees, human rights abuses, and the treatment of U.S. citizens. Witnesses testify about mass executions. (Clymer, pp. 196-197; Adam Clymer interview with Mark Schneider, 11/27/1997)

October

The Senate adopts by voice vote an EMK-sponsored “sense of Congress” amendment stating that U.S. aid should be denied to the military junta in Chile. Later in the year Congress adopts a resolution calling on the military government to permit the International Red Cross access to political prisoners. (1973 CQ Almanac, p. 831; Clymer, p. 197)

November

EMK learns that his twelve year old son, EMK, Jr., has cancer in his leg.

December

On the 6th, EMK gives a major speech on energy. Rejecting Nixon’s call for energy independence, EMK argues that Europe, Japan, and the United States need to work together with the oil producing states to create greater stability in oil production and trade. (Clymer, pp. 211-212)

On the 17th, the Senate debates a series of amendments to the foreign aid bill for FY 1974, including an EMK amendment to bar any use of the funds appropriated for support to the Chilean junta. EMK states: “It seems to me that until that country is prepared to return to the orderly processes of democratic institutions and democratic government, it does not behoove the United States to be extending military assistance, aid, and grants to Chile.” The Senate adopts the amendment by voice vote, but the House rejects a similar amendment. (1973 CQ Almanac, p. 186)

March

OPEC lifts its embargo on oil to the U.S. but prices remain high.

April

EMK travels to the Soviet Union with Bob Hunter and family, where he first meets Leonid Brezhnev. Schneider does not go on the trip. (Clymer, pp. 211-213)

May

EMK leads a fight in the Senate against spending an additional $266 million in Vietnam beyond the over $1 billion that had already been approved for the year. The Senate (43 to 38) backs EMK and the money is not spent. Later that year EMK makes another attempt to cut funding in Vietnam but does not prevail. (Clymer, pp. 216-217)

April-May

Schneider goes on a mission for EMK to Chile. He talks with the government about releasing political prisoners. (Adam Clymer interview with Mark Schneider, 11/27/1997)
Spring  EMK fights unsuccessfully to eliminate the oil depletion allowance, which is a tax break for oil companies. (Clymer, p. 211)

August  Nixon resigns and Vice President Gerald Ford becomes president.

September  Ford announces a limited clemency plan in which deserters and draft evaders could serve “alternative service” as a means of “earned reentry.” (Lippman, pp. 86-87)

October  The Senate (47 to 41) approves an EMK amendment to a foreign aid bill cutting off all U.S. arms aid to Chile. The amendment does not survive a House-Senate conference, but President Gerald Ford vetoes the bill because it includes a ban on military assistance to Turkey. EMK wins approval of the ban again and it becomes law. But just before the ban goes into effect the Ford administration signs contracts with Chile for $9.2 million in spare military parts. EMK calls this an “outrageous breach of faith with conferees and Congress.” (Clymer, pp. 242-243)

November  EMK travels to Europe and the Middle East with Senator John Tunney, Bob Hunter and family. The trip includes a NATO meeting in London. (Clymer, pp. 231-232)

December  EMK’s AdPrac subcommittee holds amnesty hearings. EMK recommends that the Ford administration produce a final list of individuals in jeopardy of facing legal prosecution and extend the deadline for applying for clemency. Both recommendations are adopted. (Lippman, p. 87)

On the 28th, Schneider and Bob Hunter visit Cuba and meet with Fidel Castro, reportedly to prepare a visit by EMK. (The Washington Post, 01/13/1975)

1975  EMK becomes vice chairman of the North Atlantic Treaty Assembly. (Lippman, p. 193)

January  President Gerald Ford announces he will increase oil import fees $1 a barrel on February 1st as a first step in a comprehensive plan to reduce imports and consumption and promote energy independence. His plan calls for further $1 increases in March and April. Democratic leaders in Congress denounce the plan and push through a bill (HR 1767) to suspend Ford’s action for ninety days. EMK and Henry Jackson (D-WA) collaborate on a version of the bill, with Schneider doing the staff work for EMK. In March, Ford vetoes the bill but also postpones further increases in oil import fees. (1974 CQ, pp. 723-724; The Washington Post, 02/19/1975)

February  EMK visits Mexico and says in an interview with the television station Televisa on the 9th that the American trade embargo against Cuba should be ended.
Whatever reasons JFK had for setting up the embargo at the time, EMK says, “now they are invalid… I believe the idea of isolating Cuba was a mistake.” It is not clear which staffers, if any, accompanied EMK. (The New York Times, 2/10/1975)

On the 22nd, EMK introduces legislation to impose a moratorium on U.S. arms sales to the Persian Gulf in order to obtain an explanation from the Ford Administration of its long-term objectives in the Gulf. EMK states that there is an “apparently indiscriminate administration policy of selling as much military equipment, and training as many foreign soldiers, as foreign countries will pay for.” (Clymer, p. 237; THOMAS on S 795)

March

On the 4th, EMK introduces a resolution calling on the Ford Administration to normalize relations with Cuba. (The New York Times, 03/05/1975)

On the 11th, the Bay of Pigs Association, composed of survivors of the military invasion of Cuba in 1961, announces it wants its flag back from the JFK Library as a protest against EMK’s bill. Upon receiving the flag in 1962, JFK had promised the flag would fly again over a free Cuba. (The New York Times, 03/12/1975)

Mar.-Apr. Schneider writes a memo to EMK asking him to reconsider U.S. military spending proposals with the coming end of American involvement in Vietnam. In early April, EMK arranges a working dinner at his home to discuss the administration’s military budget requests for 1976 with Schneider, Barry Blechman of the Brookings Institution, Joseph Woolsey, a former staffer of Senator John Stennis (D-MS), Morton Halperin, a former Pentagon official, and Robert Hunter, EMK’s foreign policy advisor. The group decides that there is no reason for expensive new weapons programs or large increases in overall military spending. EMK approaches other senators about making a concerted effort to reduce spending and kill some specific weapons programs. (Lippman, p. 194)

April

May

EMK travels to Israel and the Persian Gulf. It is unclear which staffers travel with EMK. In Saudi Arabia, EMK meets with King Khalid who states that the Arab nations cannot relieve the energy problems of the U.S. until there is a just solution to the Middle East conflict with Israel. EMK meets with the Shah of Iran, Mohammed Reza Pahle, as well as student leaders. EMK questions the wisdom of the U.S. selling large quantities of arms to the Persian Gulf states. EMK visits Israel and meets with Premier Yitzhak Rabin in Jerusalem. He tells the press his prediction is that Congress will continue to support Israel in its efforts to achieve a settlement based on “safe, secured, and recognized borders.” (The New York Times, 6/01/1975; James Macgregor Burns, Edward Kennedy and the Camelot Legacy: New York, W.W. Norton & Co., 1976, p. 349)

Congress passes the “Indo-China Migration and Refugee Assistance Act,” which establishes temporary resettlement assistance for refugees from Cambodia and Vietnam and requires the president to submit several reports on the status of such refugees. The legislation is sponsored by Rep. Peter Rodino (D-NJ) in the House and John Sparkman (D-AL) in the Senate. EMK is not a cosponsor. (THOMAS, Public Law 94-23)

EMK and Alan Cranston (D-CA) organize a group of liberal Senators, including Armed Services Committee Members John Culver of Iowa, Patrick Leahy of Vermont, Gary Hart of Colorado, and Stuart Symington of Missouri, to coordinate a campaign to against a defense procurement bill. On the 13th, the group meets to plan its strategy for the debate. The Senators decide to raise foreign policy concerns during the debate and to try to delay the debate to allow more time to consider an Armed Services Committee report and the House debate on the bill. EMK and Cranston work out a deal with Armed Services chairman John Stennis (D-MS) to postpone the debate until after Memorial Day. In return, EMK and Cranston agree to give Stennis a copy of their proposed amendments beforehand and limit the time on each segment of the debate. EMK, Cranston and Jacob Javits (R-NY), enlist conservatives, including Barry Goldwater (R-AZ), to join them in signing a “Dear Colleague” letter to every Senator calling their attention to what they hoped would be a “Great Debate” over U.S. foreign and defense policies in the post-Vietnam era. (Lippman, pp. 194-196)

June

The “Great Debate” stalls after one day and the proposed amendments to cut defense spending and weapons programs fail. Some Senators engage in actual debate the first day. But most simply deliver speeches and then leave the floor on the second day after it becomes clear conservatives have the votes to defeat the proposed amendments. Symington’s amendment to trim the procurement bill from $25 billion to $23.8 billion loses 38 to 58. EMK’s amendment to delete funds for Minuteman III missiles falls 32 to 57. So does McGovern’s amendment to delete funds from the B-1 bomber. It loses 32 to 57. The overall bill passes 77 to 6, with EMK and Cranston voting for the bill. EMK admits that the debate did not live up to expectations but he calls it “helpful.” He lashes out at Senators who criticize the debate. (Lippman, pp. 196-197)

On the 18th, EMK testifies in front of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee regarding his legislation to institute a six-month moratorium on Gulf arms sales. “We are running incredible risks of reducing rather than enhancing security in the region,” EMK states, arguing the policy “will hook these nations on the heroin of modern arms.” (Clymer, p. 237)

June
Congress passes a military aid bill that bans grant assistance and weapon sales to Chile by the U.S. government and private contractors and limits economic assistance. EMK proposes the controversial amendment, which is adopted in the Senate 48 to 39 over the strong objections of Strom Thurmond (R-SC), Jessie Helms (R-NC), and other leading conservative Republicans. (1976 CQ Almanac, pp. 215, 219)

September
Orlando Letelier, former Chilean Ambassador to the U.S. and later defense minister under Allende, is murdered, along with another colleague, in Washington by a car bomb. Letelier, an outspoken critic of the junta that overthrew Allende, may have been on his way to see Schneider. EMK condemns the murder and criticizes Ford’s support of Chilean military dictator Augusto Pinochet. He says Ford’s policy amounts to “human rights be damned.” He introduces a resolution calling for a federal investigation, but there is no action on the resolution. (Clymer, p. 243; Clymer interview with Nancy Soderberg, 03/31/1997, pp. 11-12; The Washington Post, 09/22/1976)

Schneider and Nancy Soderberg split up responsibilities for the different countries, with Schneider traveling to Chile, Uruguay and Argentina. Greg Craig travels to all of the countries with EMK. In Chile, EMK is confronted by hostile protesters organized by the country’s military rulers. EMK alters his itinerary after his car is pelted by eggs at his first scheduled stop at a local hospital. He meets with opposition leaders and family members of “disappeared” persons. EMK praises them for their courage to meet with him, saying: “You have spoken out on behalf of those condemned to silence.” (Clymer, pp. 387-388)

November  The Senate adopts EMK’s amendment to the foreign economic aid bill placing greater limits on economic assistance to Chile. (1975 CQ Almanac, pp. 339, 340)

February  EMK pushes a ban on all arms sales by any American companies to Chile through the Senate as an amendment to the foreign aid bill, but the ban is dropped in the House-Senate conference. Ford subsequently vetoes the bill over other issues. (Clymer, p. 242)

April  EMK successfully promotes the arms sales ban to Chile again, and it becomes law when Ford signs it on June 25th. However, Ford also signs a $9.2 million contract to sell spare parts just before the bill becomes law, which EMK calls an “outrageous breach of faith with the conferees and the Congress.” (Clymer, pp. 242-43)

September  On the 21st, former Chilean Ambassador to the U.S. under Salvador Allende’s government, Orlando Letelier, is killed by a car bomb in Washington, D.C. EMK introduces S Res 561 condemning the assassination and calling for a federal investigation. EMK also critiques the Ford administration’s attitude on Chile, arguing it amounts to “human rights be damned.” (Clymer, pp. 242-43)

December  On the 16th, EMK and Mathias send a letter to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence urging it to investigate the reported secret activities inside the U.S. of intelligence agencies of “friendly” nations such as Chile and South Korea. (The New York Times, 12/16/1976)

1979  EMK travels with Joan Kennedy and Teddy, Jr. to Mexico.

May  On the 15th, the U.S. recalls its ambassador from Chile as a protest against the Chilean Supreme Court’s decision not to extradite three military officers to stand trial in Washington, D.C. for the assassination of Letelier. The State Department reportedly does not want to cut off all aid to Chile as recommended by EMK due to the possibility that the officers will stand trial in Chile. (The Washington Post, 05/16/1979)

August  The Washington Post reports on the 3rd that EMK and Representative Tom Harkin (D-IA) have proposed legislation requiring public disclosure of private lending to Chile, on which Chile now depends due to the low level of official aid being provided by the U.S. (The Washington Post, 08/03/1979)

October  The Chilean Supreme Court rejects the appeal made by the U.S. regarding the extradition of the military officers wanted in relation to the assassination of Letelier, and orders the men freed. The official U.S. response is to order its ambassador home for consultation, far short of the response called for by EMK and Church, which is cutting off all official aid and withdrawing all military and non-essential diplomatic personnel. (The Washington Post, 10/03/1979)

February
The State Department lifts two sanctions imposed on Chile after the assassination of Orlando Letelier in 1976. EMK states that the Reagan Administration has made antiterrorism “one of its highest priorities” and that it has “failed the first test in the case of Chile.” (The Washington Post, 02/21/1981)

October
Ending a five-year debate on the issue, the Senate votes to lift the ban on aid and arms sales to Pinochet’s regime in Chile. EMK, as the original sponsor of the cut-off, argues Chile does not deserve U.S. aid as it has refused to cooperate in the U.S. investigation of the assassination of Letelier. Chile’s refusal to cooperate “represents a mockery of U.S. policy in opposition to state-sponsored terrorism.” The Senate does vote 80-0 to adopt a compromise amendment to the FY1982 and 1983 foreign aid authorization bill sponsored by Senator Charles Percy (R-III) stating that the president can not provide aid or allow arms sales to Chile without certifying to Congress that Chile has made “significant progress” in improving human rights. (1981 CQ Almanac, p. 176)

1983
EMK travels with Patrick Kennedy to Panama.

1985

June
Pinochet lifts the “state of siege” in Chile and allows opposition newspapers to publish, through under strict censorship, and still retaining powers of arbitrary arrest. (Clymer, p. 387)

August
All opposition parties in Chile agree on a timetable for elections that will keep the military junta in power until 1989. (Clymer, p. 388)

January
On the 15th, EMK arrives in Santiago, Chile and is met with mass protests against him. He meets with opposition leaders and family members of “disappeared” persons. EMK praises them for their courage to meet with him, saying: “You have spoken out on behalf of those condemned to silence.” EMK’s South America trip also includes visits to Peru, Uruguay, Brazil and Argentina, which are reportedly uneventful. In Peru, EMK meets with President Alan Garcia. EMK travels with Jean Kennedy Smith, Pat Lawford and staff, including Greg Craig, Nancy Soderberg and Mark Schneider. (Clymer, p. 389)

1987
EMK travels with Greg Craig and Jim Rooney to Panama.
1989  EMK travels to Mexico with Steve Smith, William Smith, Eunice Shriver, Jean Kennedy Smith, and staff including Nancy Soderberg, Mark Schneider, Michael Myers, Chris Doherty, John Douglas and Charles Stein.

    March  EMK returns to Chile to attend the inauguration of Patricio Aylwin as the elected successor to Pinochet. EMK travels with John Douglas, Mark Schneider and Nancy Soderberg, as well as Vice President Dan Quayle in Air Force Two. The finale of the inauguration is held in the infamous national stadium as a tribute to those executed there. (Clymer, p. 466)
1962 Europe/Israel: EMK and Claude Hooton travel to London, Brussels, Israel, Greece, Vienna, Poland and West Berlin; EMK meets Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion in Israel, has lunch with President DeValera in Dublin, and meets RFK in West Berlin for EMK’s 30th birthday.

1964 Europe: EMK travels to Ireland, Bonn, Munich, Frankfurt and Italy with William vanden Heuvel to raise money for the John F. Kennedy Library; during the trip EMK meets British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and French Premier Georges Pompidou, and retraces the steps JFK had taken in Ireland the previous year when JFK had promised “to come back in the springtime.”
