1973

September
According to Lippman, EMK meets Robert E. Hunter, an editor of Foreign Policy magazine, through Richard Holbrooke, who is the managing editor of the magazine. EMK hires Hunter as a full-time foreign policy aide. According to Clymer, this is part of a conscious effort to assert a voice in foreign affairs. Because of the legacy of JFK, EMK has unusual access to foreign leaders without having to hold formal positions on foreign policy-related committees. Hunter is brought on in order to create a more organized and less “episodic” foreign policy approach. (Theo Lippman, Jr., Senator Ted Kennedy: The Career Behind the Image, New York: W.W. Norton, 1976, pp. 179; Adam Clymer, Edward Kennedy, New York: William Morrow & Co., 1999, pp. 211)

Influenced by the Irish politician, John Hume, EMK writes an article for Foreign Policy in which he moderates his early statements on Northern Ireland from temporary direct rule to calling for power sharing, as well as denouncing violence.

On the 11th, the military junta in Chile led by Augusto Pinochet ousts democratically elected Prime Minister Salvador Allende. The U.S. government quickly recognizes the new regime despite human rights violations such as mass executions. Less than three weeks later, EMK convenes a hearing with witnesses who have escaped and who describe mass executions in the national stadium. Later in the year EMK wins congressional adoption of a resolution calling on Chile to permit the International Committee of the Red Cross access to prisoners. (Clymer, pp. 196-197)

October
Hunter travels with EMK and Joan Kennedy to Zurich, Venice, London, and Salzburg.

November
Teddy Kennedy Jr. is diagnosed with cancer in his leg.

December
On the 6th, EMK gives a speech on energy and foreign policy, arguing the long-term solution to the current oil crisis in wake of the Yom Kippur War is for the U.S., Europe, and Japan to work together and avoid cut-throat competition as well as work with the Arab oil states to create greater stability in oil production and trade. This goes against the Nixon Administration’s response to the hike in oil prices, which is to make the U.S. independent of foreign oil. (Clymer, pp. 211)

On the 17th, the Senate debates a series of amendments to the foreign aid bill for FY 1974. EMK proposes an amendment to bar any use of the funds appropriated for support to the Chilean junta. States EMK, “It seems to me that until that country is prepared to return to the orderly processes of democratic institutions and democratic government, it does not behoove the United States to be extending military assistance, aid, and grants to Chile.” (1973 Congressional Quarterly Almanac, Washington D.C.: Congressional Quarterly Inc., pp. 186)

On the 20th, Congress approves a foreign aid bill for FY 1974, the first one since 1971.

April
EMK travels with Joan Kennedy, Teddy, Jr., Hunter, and Jim King to the USSR, Yugoslavia, Rumania and West Germany. EMK firsts travels to West Germany where he meets with Chancellor Willy Brandt. On the 19th, EMK speaks in Moscow on arms control, arguing the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. should not test new nuclear warheads, endorsing a Soviet proposal to try to halt the arms race in the Indian Ocean where the Soviets use Indian ports and the U.S. is developing an island base at Diego Garcia. On the 21st, he gives a speech at Moscow State University and Hunter reportedly cuts off his speech after some hostile questions. On the 22nd EMK is granted a four-hour meeting in the Kremlin with Leonid Brezhnev, the general secretary of the Communist Party. In this meeting, they discuss arms control as well as the status of refuseniks and dissidents. While in Moscow, he also visits with a group of dissidents in Alexander Lerner’s apartment. Despite Soviet opposition to the meeting, certain dissidents receive emigration visas, among them a famous cellist whom Joan Kennedy had taken a personal interest in. (Clymer, pp. 212-215; The Washington Post, 05/27/1974)

August
On the 9th, Gerald R. Ford assumes the presidency after Richard Nixon’s resignation. Ford continues the friendly attitude towards the Chilean junta.

October
The Senate debates cutting off military aid to Turkey on the 1st in response to its invasion of Cyprus in July. EMK offers an amendment cutting off aid to Chile. The Senate should go on record “in deploiring the complete violation of human rights and human liberties which has been the record” of the Chilean junta. His amendment is narrowly adopted. (1974 CQ Almanac, pp. 550)

On the 2nd, the Senate debates the foreign aid bill for FY 1975. EMK proposes an amendment barring any military assistance to Chile, which is adopted by a voice vote but later deleted in conference. (1974 CQ Almanac, pp. 538, 550)

November
EMK with Joan and Rose Kennedy, Jean Kennedy Smith, John Tunney, and Hunter, attends a NATO meeting in London, has lunch with President Valery Giscard d’Estaing in Paris, meets with Premier Anwar Sadat in Egypt, with Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and his predecessor Golda Meir in Israel, with President Francisco da Costa Gomes in Portugal, and with King Hussein in Jordan. Ford meets with Brezhnev in Vladivostok where they agree to ceilings on bombers, missiles, and multiple-warhead missiles.
On the 19th, EMK goes to Portugal, where the forty-two-year dictatorship of Antonio Salazar and Marcello Caetano had been overthrown that spring. EMK meets with the new President, Francisco da Costa Gomes, as well as army officers and socialists. In a speech in Lisbon the next day, EMK tells reporters that he will urge the U.S. to provide economic aid to Portugal, but also warns this aid will not be provided if Portugal turns Communist. Back in D.C., EMK meets with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and urges him not to give up on democracy in Portugal yet. In the Senate, he says, “I believe that the United States should support efforts by Portuguese democrats to forge popular institutions in their country. Let it not be said this experiment was jeopardized because we turned a blind eye to what is happening in Portugal....” (Clymer, pp. 232)

December

On the 3rd, the Senate debates a compromise version of the foreign aid bill negotiated between the Congress and the Ford Administration. EMK proposes an amendment to the bill on the floor authorizing $5 million in grants and $50 million in loans for assistance to Portugal and Portuguese colonies in Africa gaining independence. (1974 CQ Almanac, pp. 541)

On the 12th EMK, along with Senator Walter Mondale (D-MN) and Senator Charles Mathias (R-MD), introduce a resolution calling on Ford to “make every possible effort to negotiate further nuclear arms reduction measures.” EMK argues the limits are too high and do not slow the arms race. This is reportedly part of Hunter’s strategy to broaden EMK’s approach to arms control, and not focus just on a test ban treaty. (Clymer, pp. 232)

On the 28th, Hunter and Mark Schneider, another EMK staffer, visit Cuba and meet with Fidel Castro in order to reportedly prepare a visit by EMK to the island. (The Washington Post, 01/13/1975)

January

After working with the State Department, EMK, Mondale, and Mathias introduce their new resolution on the 17th. This statement goes further, insisting that the Vladivostok principles not be used as a basis for increasing the American missile arsenal. However, they settled for a promise of immediate follow-up of Vladivostok by the Ford Administration, citing the desire to support détente. (Clymer, pp. 232-233)

February

EMK visits Mexico and says in an interview with the television station Televisa on the 9th that the American trade embargo against Cuba should be ended. Whatever reasons JFK had for setting up the embargo at the time, EMK says, “now they are invalid...I believe the idea of isolating Cuba was a mistake.” (The New York Times, 02/10/1975)

On the 22nd, EMK introduces legislation to impose a moratorium on U.S. arms sales to the Persian Gulf in order to obtain an explanation from the Ford
Administration of its long-term objectives in the Gulf. EMK states that there is an “apparently indiscriminate administration policy of selling as much military equipment, and training as many foreign soldiers, as foreign countries will pay for.” (Clymer, pp. 237; THOMAS on S 795)

March

On the 4th, EMK introduces a resolution calling on the Ford Administration to normalize relations with Cuba. (The New York Times, 03/05/1975)

On the 11th, the Bay of Pigs Association, composed of survivors of the military invasion of Cuba in 1961, announces it wants its flag back from the JFK Library as a protest against EMK’s bill. Upon receiving the flag in 1962, JFK had promised the flag would fly again over a free Cuba. (The New York Times, 03/12/1975)

On the 21st, EMK, Senator Claiborne Pell (D-RI) and Senator Jacob Javits (R-NY) introduce legislation to halt the development of the military base at Diego Garcia in the Indian Ocean and to limit both U.S. and Soviet military deployment in the region. (THOMAS on S Res 117)

April

EMK invites Hunter, Schneider, Admiral Eugene LaRoque (ret.), Barry Blechman, and others to dinner at his McLean, Virginia home to discuss military spending proposals. (Lippman, pp. 194)

May

On the 20th, EMK introduces legislation that expresses the sense of the Senate that Ford should propose an immediate suspension of underground nuclear testing as long as the Soviet Union does as well, and the U.S. should begin negotiations for a permanent treaty to ban all nuclear tests. (THOMAS on S Res 163)

EMK visits Israel, Saudi Arabia, Iran, and Iraq. He travels with Kara Kennedy, Jean Kennedy Smith, Pat and Victoria Lawford, Edward P. Morgan, Ken Regan and Bob Hunter. In Saudi Arabia, EMK meets with King Khalid, who states that the Arab nations cannot relieve the energy problems of the U.S. until there is a just solution to the Middle East conflict with Israel. (The New York Times, 05/24/1975) On the 27th, EMK meets with the Shah of Iran, Mohammed Reza Pahlevi, as well as student leaders. EMK questions the wisdom of the U.S. selling large quantities of arms to the Persian Gulf states. (The New York Times, 05/28/1975) On the 30th, EMK visits Israel and meets with Premier Yitzhak Rabin in Jerusalem. He tells the press his prediction is that Congress will continue to support Israel in its efforts to achieve a settlement based on “safe, secured, and recognized borders.” (The New York Times, 06/01/1975)

June

On the 5th, EMK proposes an amendment to the FY 1976 military procurement authorization eliminating $203.1 million in funds for purchasing 50 additional
On the 18th, EMK testifies in front of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee regarding his legislation to institute a six-month moratorium on Gulf arms sales. “We are running incredible risks of reducing rather than enhancing security in the region,” EMK states, arguing the policy “will hook these nations on the heroin of modern arms.” (Clymer, pp. 237)

September
On the 24th, the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, established this year to investigate domestic transgression by the Central Intelligence Agency and the broader Intelligence Community, announces it has discovered that the CIA opened mail to and from prominent American politicians for 20 years ending in 1973, among them EMK. (The New York Times, 09/25/1975)

October
EMK writes an essay in Foreign Affairs arguing U.S. arms sales to the Persian Gulf is short-sighted and that a long-term strategy towards the region needs to be developed. It is likely Hunter is the staffer who worked on this article. (Foreign Affairs, October 1975, pp. 14-35)

November
On the 3rd, the Senate adopts an amendment to the foreign economic aid bill sponsored by EMK setting a ceiling on all economic assistance to Chile ($90 million in 1976 and $50 million in 1977). Despite Congress having prohibited military aid to Chile in 1974 and limiting direct economic grants to about $25 million, EMK argues total economic assistance for 1974 totaled more than $112 million. (1975 CQ Almanac, pp. 339-340)

On the 14th, the FY 1976 defense appropriations bill is “sailing smoothly toward final passage” when EMK offers an amendment to close down the Anti-Ballistic Missile site near Grand Forks, North Dakota, losing by only one vote. On the 18th, the amendment loses again, but a subsequent amendment to shut down the site with the important exception of its new missile-monitoring radar system is approved. (1975 CQ Almanac, pp. 880)

January
EMK travels to Canada with Hunter.

February
EMK pushes a ban on all arms sales to Chile through the Senate as an amendment to the foreign aid bill, but it is taken in the House-Senate conference. Ford subsequently vetoes the bill over other issues. (Clymer, pp. 242)

April
Again EMK successfully promotes the arms sales ban to Chile, and it becomes law when Ford signs it on June 25th. However, Ford also signs a $9.2 million contract to sell spare parts just before the bill becomes law, which EMK calls an “outrageous breach of faith with the conferees and the Congress.” (Clymer, pp. 242-243)

Hunter and Robert Bates go to South Africa for four days to examine the conditions first-hand to help EMK form a policy towards Africa. (The Washington Post, 04/30/1976)

August

On the 2nd the Senate debates the FY 1977 Defense Department appropriations. EMK offers an amendment to delete $1.9 million from funds provided for operation of the radar system of the Safeguard Anti-Ballistic Missile System. The Pentagon agrees the funds are not needed to operate the radar at the reduced level mandated by the FY 1976 defense appropriations bill. The amendment is approved. (1976 CQ Almanac, pp. 776)

Fall

The Kennedys host Hume while he visits U.S.

September

On the 21st, former Chilean Ambassador to the U.S. under Allende’s government, Orlando Letelier, is killed by a car bomb in Washington, D.C. EMK introduces S Res 561 condemning the assassination and calling for a federal investigation. EMK also critiques the Ford administration’s attitude on Chile, arguing it amounts to “human rights be damned.” (Clymer, pp. 242-243)

October

November

Traveling with Joe Kennedy, Claude Hooton and staff, including Hunter and Dale DeHaan, EMK meets with Prime Minister Karamanlis in Greece and President Giovanni Leone in Rome.

December

On the 16th, EMK and Mathias send a letter to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence urging it to investigate the reported secret activities inside the U.S. of intelligence agencies of “friendly” nations such as Chile and South Korea. (The New York Times, 12/16/1976)

1977

January

Hunter leaves EMK’s staff to become Director of West European Affairs on Carter’s National Security Council. He approaches Jan Kalicki to replace him. (The Washington Post, 01/24/1977; Clymer interview with Jan Kalicki, 12/09/1993, pp. 1-2)

March

On St. Patrick’s Day, the “Four Horsemen”, EMK, Rep. “Tip” O’Neil (D-MA), Rep. Hugh Carey (D-NY), and Senator Patrick Moynihan (D-NY), release a joint statement (drafted in large part by Hume) encouraging a peaceful resolution to the conflict and to discourage Americans from aiding the Irish Republican Army.
1983 Hunter is named lead consultant on a Reagan-appointed National Bipartisan Commission on Central America headed by Kissinger.

January The Commission on Central America reports on the 11th that the administration’s policy of covert action in support of the Contras is a good one. Over Kissinger’s objections, a majority of the commission says aid to El Salvador should be conditioned on improvements in human rights, especially a curb on the right-wing death squads that have killed thousands of civilians. (Clymer, pp. 355)

On the 15th, EMK denounces the commission’s report in The Washington Post. He says the administration’s Central America policy is repeating the classic mistake of relying on “armed force” to support “forces of reaction and repression in the region.” The issue is of particular interest in Massachusetts within liberal intellectual circles, as well as Catholic orders like the Maryknolls who have sent nuns to Central America. (Clymer, pp. 355)

March Clinton nominates Jean Kennedy Smith as U.S. Ambassador to Ireland.

July Hunter becomes U.S. Ambassador to NATO serving until January 1998. One of his duties is dealing with the Bosnian War.

October EMK votes in favor of a resolution prohibiting funding for U.S. military actions in Bosnia without congressional approval. (1993 CQ Almanac, pp. 41-S)

1994

EMK continues to vote for various bills that authorize the use of force in Bosnia with advance approval, unless evacuating UN peacekeepers, to protect NATO exclusion zones and UN forces in the region, but limits the role and duration of those combat forces. EMK initially supports the unilateral lifting of an arms embargo on Bosnia, though by 1995 he comes to support Clinton’s position to keep the embargo in place. (Selected Congressional Votes since 1982, CRS, pp.10-12, 21)

November Hunter visits Ireland for two days to speak with the Oireachtas Foreign Affairs Committee and the Institute of European Affairs. He speaks about the NATO sponsored Partnership for Peace (PFP) recently launched by Clinton to expand NATO to Central and Eastern European countries and whether Ireland would join the PFP. He stays with JKS. (The Irish Times, 11/04/1994)

November The Dayton Peace Accords are signed.
1996

Sept-Oct. Hunter goes to Ireland for a conference on security issues in Europe. JKS, who attends the conference, calls Hunter a “close friend of the Kennedy family.” (The Irish Times, 10/01/1996)
Positions w/ EMK:
• 1973-1977: foreign policy advisor

Important issues Hunter works on with EMK:
• Middle East: EMK gives a 1973 speech on oil and foreign policy, which Clymer identifies as EMK’s first major initiative after bringing Hunter onboard to develop a more organized approach to foreign policy; EMK writes a 1975 Foreign Affairs article on Persian Gulf policy (on which Hunter likely assists); introduction of 1975 legislation to stop U.S. arm sales to the region.
• Arms Control: 1974 EMK-Mondale-Mathias resolution, which comes out of Hunter’s efforts to broaden EMK’s approach to arms control beyond test ban treaty; legislative attempt to ban underground nuclear testing; legislative attempts to cut back on missile programs.
• Portugal: EMK supports the overthrow of Salazar and visits Portugal in 1974 with Hunter to press for aid to the new government.
• Chile: EMK fights against aid to Pinochet (Mark Schneider is lead staffer on Chilean issues, but Hunter is also involved).
• Cuba: EMK’s efforts to normalize U.S. relations with Castro.

Hunter’s foreign trips:
• 1973 trip with EMK to Zurich, Venice, London, and Salzburg
• 1974 trip with EMK to Yugoslavia, Rumania, USSR, and West Germany
• 1974 trip with EMK to London, Paris, Egypt, Israel, Lisbon, and Jordan
• 1974 trip to Cuba
• 1975 trip with EMK to Saudi Arabia, Iran, Israel and Iraq
• 1976 trip with EMK to Canada
• 1976 trip with Robert Bates to South Africa to help EMK develop an Africa policy
• 1976 trip with EMK to Italy and Corsica
• 1976 trip with EMK to Greece

Other positions:
• 1972: Associate Exec. Director of platform committee, Democratic National Convention
• 1977-1981: National Security Council (Western Europe then Middle East) under Carter and principle author of the Carter Doctrine
• 1983-84: Special advisor on Lebanon to Speaker of the House “Tip” O’Neill
• 1983-84: Lead consultant to National Bipartisan Commission on Central America
• 1983-1993: V.P. for International Politics and Director of European Studies at Center for Strategic and International Studies
• 1992: Senior foreign policy adviser for Clinton campaign
• 1993-1998: U.S. Ambassador to NATO
• 1998-Present: Senior Adviser at the RAND Corporation
