<td>April EMK travels with Joan Kennedy, Teddy, Jr., Bob Hunter and Jim King to the USSR, Yugoslavia, Rumania and West Germany. [Regan likely accompanies EMK on the trip as well, though the only confirmation for this is a 01/06/1975 Time article featuring a photograph taken by Ken Regan of EMK and Teddy, Jr., walking together in Moscow; EMK also recalls in an interview with Clymer that Regan participated in this trip as well. (Clymer interview with EMK, 06/02/1997)] Teddy Kennedy Jr. had just been diagnosed with cancer in his leg the previous fall, and has recently begun a two-year methotrextate cancer treatment in February, 1974. EMK firsts travels to West Germany where he meets with Chancellor Willy Brandt. On the 19th, EMK speaks in Moscow on arms control, arguing the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. should not test new nuclear warheads,</td>

endorsing a Soviet proposal to try to halt the arms race in the Indian Ocean where the Soviets use Indian ports and the U.S. is developing an island base at Diego Garcia. On the 21st, he gives a speech at Moscow State University and Hunter reportedly cuts off his speech after some hostile questions. On the 22nd EMK is granted a four-hour meeting in the Kremlin with Leonid Brezhnev, the general secretary of the Communist Party. In this meeting, they discuss arms control as well as the status of refuseniks and dissidents. While in Moscow, he also visits with a group of dissidents in Alexander Lerner’s apartment. Despite Soviet opposition to the meeting, certain dissidents receive emigration visas, among them a famous cellist whom Joan Kennedy had taken a personal interest in.

(Clymer, pp. 212-215; The Washington Post, 05/27/1974)

1975

July  Regan attends/cover Rose Kennedy’s 85th birthday party in Hyannisport, where he takes a photo of roughly 30 Kennedys.

1977

December  On Christmas Eve, EMK travels with Regan, Jan Kalicki, Carey Parker, Jerome Cohen, two Boston reporters, and numerous Kennedy family members to China. EMK visits the Great Wall, the Forbidden City, and other tourist sites, but EMK’s itinerary requires constant negotiation during the trip as the Chinese try to prevent him from seeing a prison, a university, and a trial. EMK does finally visit a university and a prison but the visits are tightly controlled. EMK also is allowed to visit Johnny Foo, who had been left behind when his parents fled China twenty years earlier. Foo wants to visit them in Massachusetts and then return to China. EMK presents Chinese leaders with a list of Chinese citizens who have been prevented from leaving the country. Although Chinese officials keep telling EMK they will not discuss the list, one official tells Kalicki they will look at it. (Clymer, pp. 261-265)

After meeting with various lower officials, EMK meets with Huang Hua, minister of foreign affairs, and Deng Xiaoping, who is emerging as the next leader of China in the wake of Mao’s death in 1976. EMK tells them that he and other Democrats are willing to break relations with Taiwan to secure better relations with China, but that they need assurances that the Chinese will not invade Taiwan. Deng and Hua both tell EMK that China cannot make any guarantees and that the U.S. should stop interfering in internal Chinese matters. As the meeting ends, Chinese diplomat T’ing Yuan-hung tells Kalicki that China will not publicly renounce the use of force but may do so privately. (Clymer, pp. 263-265)

January  After leaving China, EMK holds a press conference in Hong Kong in which he says he did not make progress in resolving the issue of Taiwan but that the meetings were direct and non-ideological. EMK also announces that he has given the Chinese authorities a list of twenty-two citizens who want permission to leave China. (Clymer, pp. 265-266)

Summer

Chinese émigré Johnny Foo arrives in the U.S. and meets his parents for the first time in 20 years. EMK attends the reunion, stating, “I hope the process of normalization can continue, and then this can continue.” Without public announcement, others on EMK’s list are later allowed to leave. (Clymer, p. 270)

September

EMK travels to the Soviet Union with Regan, Kalicki, Larry Horowitz and Richard Burke. This is EMK’s second trip to the Soviet Union. According to Kalicki, EMK had established a personal correspondence with Soviet leaders and in 1978 “launched a new stage of that correspondence to try to move the arms control discussion forward.” EMK coordinates his efforts with the Carter administration, which is negotiating a new treaty limiting strategic nuclear weapons (SALT) with the Soviets. EMK first attends an international health care conference in Alma-Alta in Central Asia, but the visit is overshadowed by word that EMK’s meeting with Brezhnev has been cancelled due to the leader’s poor health. EMK is furious, and the meeting is rescheduled. EMK brings Brezhnev a gift of Soviet melons and bread. EMK and Brezhnev meet for nearly two hours and discuss arms control, human rights, and the status of refuseniks. EMK states no arms control agreement will get through the Senate unless the U.S.S.R shows greater sensitivity on human rights. Brezhnev agrees to reconsider the cases of eighteen families attempting to emigrate. Brezhnev slurs his speech throughout the meeting, which is eventually cut short after a Soviet official passes Kalicki a note saying that a sudden meeting had come up that required Brezhnev’s presence. (Clymer, pp. 271-273; Clymer interview with Kalicki, pp. 2-3; 1978 CQ Almanac, p. 26)

The next morning EMK goes to Alexander Lerner’s apartment to meet with dissidents, including Andrei Sakharov and his wife, Yelena Bonner. EMK privately tells two of the dissidents, Boris Katz and Lev David Roitburg, that they will receive permission to leave the country. To secure their release, EMK had agreed to keep the visas secret until he had left Moscow. The USSR also grants an exit visa to physicist Benjamin G. Levich, who is the first member of the Academy of Sciences allowed to emigrate. EMK later visits Kazakhstan and is reportedly “mobbed by people wanting autographs and handshakes.” (Clymer, pp. 273-274)

On the 11th, EMK holds a press conference in Washington, D.C., in which he lists the names of refuseniks, including Levich, who will be allowed to leave the U.S.S.R. The Washington Post says this shows EMK’s private diplomacy to have been more effective than Carter’s public interventions on behalf of dissidents. Years later Pavlov recalls that the Soviets allowed Levich to emigrate because of EMK’s efforts. (Clymer, p. 274)
1979

October  Regan attends/covers the dedication of the John F. Kennedy Library in Boston. EMK and Carter appear together at the dedication. (Clymer, pp. 289-290)

November  EMK announces that he will challenge Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination. Regan covers the campaign.

1984  Regan covers the 1984 Democratic presidential primary campaign.

December  EMK travels to Ethiopia and Sudan over the Christmas holiday with his children, Teddy, Jr. and Kara Kennedy, and several unspecified aides to tour the famine-struck region and ensuing refugee crisis. (Regan likely accompanies EMK on this trip; he travels with EMK on the second leg of the trip to South Africa in early January and, according to Regan’s bio, Regan travels to Ethiopia around this time to photographically document the famine conditions.) In between the Ethiopia/Sudan and the South Africa legs of the trip, Kara and Teddy Jr. travel to Kenya on safari while EMK briefly flies back to the U.S. to escort John Kerry being sworn into the Senate. (Clymer, pp. 364-365)

1985

January  Regan travels to South Africa with EMK and a large group that includes Teddy, Jr., Kara Kennedy, Jean Kennedy Smith (JKS), Stephen Smith, Bob Shrum and Greg Craig. Ending apartheid had been an important cause to RFK, who had visited South Africa in 1966. After arriving in Johannesburg, EMK tours Soweto and meets with the South African foreign minister. EMK renews his request to see Nelson Mandela, imprisoned since 1962, and meets with his wife, Winnie Mandela, who says constructive engagement is “a shoulder to the wheel of apartheid.” (Clymer, pp. 368) On the 8th, the American Ambassador to South Africa, Herman Nickel, attacks EMK in a speech arguing Reagan’s policy of “constructive engagement” is good. EMK is also confronted by demonstrations from AZAPO, a black consciousness group which opposes visits from western political leaders. During the trip, Kathleen Townsend presents Tutu with the 1985 Robert F. Kennedy Human Rights Award. EMK also travels to Zambia to meet with Oliver Tambo, the exiled acting head of the African National Congress. (Clymer, pp. 363-371)

1991  Regan covers the Gulf War.

Mid-1990s  Regan covers the Bosnian conflict.
KEN REGAN FACT SHEET
Prepared by Rob Martin
Miller Center, University of Virginia, 05/29/2009

Early experience/biographical information:
- 1930s/early 40s: born in the Bronx, New York.
- Studied journalism at Columbia University and film school at NYU.
- 1964: Regan’s first big break came when he was asked to cover Sonny Liston’s fight against then-little-known boxer Cassius Clay (Muhammad Ali) for Sports Illustrated.
- 1960s/70s: as a photojournalist Regan covered the Vietnam War, the Martin Luther King and RFK assassinations, the 1968 Republican Convention in Miami, the shootings at Kent State, and the Detroit and Newark riots.
- 1970s: Regan founded his photo agency, Camera 5.

Regan’s trips with EMK:
- 1974: Soviet Union (though Regan is not included in the Senate office trip list, his participation is confirmed by a 01/06/1975 Time article featuring a picture taken by Regan of EMK walking in Moscow in 1974 with Ted Kennedy, Jr., as well as EMK’s recollection in Clymer interview, 06/02/1997)
- 1977: China
- 1978: Soviet Union
- 1984: Ethiopia/Sudan (unconfirmed: we know Regan traveled with EMK on the second leg of this trip to South Africa, and we know from his bio that Regan traveled to Ethiopia around this time to photographically document the famine conditions; it seems likely Regan accompanied EMK, Kara and Teddy, Jr. on the first leg of the trip to Ethiopia and the Sudan over Christmas, 1984; in between the two legs, EMK flew back to the U.S. to attend John Kerry’s swearing-in, while Kara and Teddy Jr. went to Kenya on safari.)
- 1985: South Africa
- Middle East trip with EMK: Regan does not specify which trip he went on with EMK – it is likely it was one of EMK’s 1974, 1975, 1986 or 1987 trips to the Middle East.

Other relevant events Regan has photographed:
- 1968: RFK assassination (Regan says in his book, “I shot everything from the Manson murders to the assassinations of Martin Luther King and Bobby Kennedy.”)
- 1975: Rose Kennedy’s 85th birthday party in Hyannisport in July; Regan takes a photo of roughly 30 Kennedys.
- 1979: Dedication of the JFK Presidential Library.
- 1984: presidential campaign and likely the Democratic National Convention.
