1954 Victoria (Vicki) Anne Reggie, the second of six children of Edmund and Doris Reggie, is born in Crowley, Louisiana. Her parents, the children of Lebanese immigrants, are devout Catholics. Her father is a city judge, banker, and politician. Her mother is an heiress to the Bunny Bread baking fortune. Her brother Gregory later describes their family life as “Mayberry-like. Our father came home from work every night, and everyone sat around the dinner table. There was no TV on. We said grace, ate dinner, and talked about what was going on in the world. We were all encouraged—no expected—to participate.” (Peter S. Canellos, ed., Last Lion: The Fall and Rise of Ted Kennedy, New York: Simon & Schuster, 2009, p. 285)

1956 August Edmund Reggie maneuvers to have the Louisiana delegation to the Democratic National Convention support John F. Kennedy (JFK) for the vice presidential nomination over Estes Kefauver. When Louisiana Governor Earl Long leaves the convention, Reggie invites JFK to speak to the Louisiana delegation convincing them to switch their support from Kefauver to JFK. Kefauver eventually wins the nomination for vice president. (The New York Times, 10/01/1992; The Boston Globe, 07/06/1992)

1959 JFK and Jackie Kennedy visit Crowley, Louisiana, for the annual rice festival. They also attend a fundraising lunch for Louisiana Democrats and a reception at the Reggie home. In an interview 35 years later, Edmund Reggie recalled that 135,000 people attended the event in the town with a population of 15,000. Reggie remembered that Jackie “blew the lid off” the rice festival when she addressed the crowd in French. (The Times-Picayune, 05/21/1994; Canellos, p. 283)

1960 August Edmund Reggie serves as co-campaign director in Louisiana for JFK’s presidential race. (The Times-Picayune, 08/28/1979)

November JFK defeats Richard Nixon to win the presidency. JFK easily carries Louisiana.
1961 JFK dispatches Edmund Reggie on a diplomatic mission to the Middle East. (Canellos, p. 283)

1968 Edmund Reggie manages RFK’s presidential campaign in Louisiana. The Reggies meet EMK for the first time when he stands-in for RFK at a campaign fundraiser in the state. Over the years, EMK visits the Reggies numerous times in Louisiana. (Canellos, p. 282)

1971 Edmund Reggie persuades EMK to speak at an AFL-CIO convention in Baton Rouge. At the time, there is considerable speculation that EMK will run for president in 1972. The Reggies and the Kennedys begin to see each other socially. The Reggies occasionally visit EMK and his wife Joan at their home in McLean, Virginia.

1972 Edwin W. Edwards, a personal friend of Edmund Reggie’s, is elected governor of Louisiana. Reggie serves as an advisor to Edwards. (The New York Times, 02/14/1974)

1975 Doris Reggie becomes a member of the Louisiana State Democratic Central Committee. She serves on the central committee until 1992. (Who’s Who in American Politics, p. 792)

July Along with other long-time Kennedy supporters, Edmund Reggie refuses to support Sargent Shriver’s presidential campaign. Instead, he is “waiting for Teddy,” despite EMK’s statements that he will not run. As Reggie explains, “It seems to be one of those times when people want the genuine thing, not the in-law imitation.” (The New York Times, 07/22/1975)

Summer Vicki Reggie works as an intern in EMK’s mail room. Except for a photo-op and a brief conversation as her internship was coming to an end, EMK and Reggie have very little contact that summer. (Clymer, p. 492; Canellos, p. 286)

1979 Vicki Reggie graduates summa cum laude from Tulane Law School, where she was an editor of the Tulane Law Review and was inducted into the Order of the Coif. After graduation she moves to Chicago to clerk for Robert A. Sprecher in the U.S. Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals. (http://www.kidsandguns.org)

August Edmund Reggie announces that he is forming a Louisiana “Draft Kennedy” committee to encourage EMK to challenge President Jimmy Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination. “I have nothing against President Carter,” Reggie explains. “It’s just that I don’t think he represents the kind of politics that the Democratic party represents.” (The Times-Picayune, 08/28/1979)
Following the resignation of executive counsel Camille Gravel, Louisiana Governor Edwin Edwards announces that his friend Edmund Reggie will serve as the next executive counsel to the governor effective October 1. Edwards emphasizes that Reggie’s “coming on board” should not be viewed as support for the draft Kennedy movement in which Reggie has been active. Reggie says the appointment will not curb his actions on EMK’s behalf and that he hopes to be able to lobby the Governor to support EMK. (The Times-Picayune, 09/15/1979)

Edmund Reggie directs EMK’s campaign in Louisiana. Doris Reggie casts the only Louisiana vote for EMK at the Democratic Convention. (Canellos, p. 282)

Vicki Reggie marries Chicago attorney Grier Raclin. They live in Washington, D.C. where they pursue legal careers. She specializes in banking law and makes partner at the firm of Keck, Mahin, and Cate. (People, 03/30/1992; Burton Hersh, The Shadow President, South Royalton, Vermont: Steerforth Press, p. 107)

Doris Reggie serves as one of twelve Louisiana delegates to the Democratic National Convention pledged to support EMK. After EMK releases his delegates on the 13th, Doris Reggie casts the only Louisiana vote to nominate EMK as the party’s presidential candidate. She also serves on the convention’s platform committee. (Clymer, p. 492; The New York Times, 08/14/1980)

EMK and Joan Kennedy announce they are getting divorced.

The Reggie’s buy a summer home on Nantucket. EMK is a frequent visitor, and he and Vicki Reggie cross paths occasionally in the 1980s. Edmund Reggie nicknames EMK “The Commander” because “he is always ordering everybody else around all the time.” “But he was a very good friend,” Reggie later recalled. “Shortly after we got here, he brought his present boat, the Mya. He brought it here to be christened and wanted Doris to hit the champagne on the bow of the boat, and she did. We had a wonderful time. Since then, our friendships have deepened a great deal. I just love him.” Doris Reggie remembered that “one of the very first visitors we had was Teddy. He sailed over to see us at our new Nantucket home . . . . He visited with us on many, many occasions. He’d spend the night and we’d go sailing or go on the beach…. He was always charming. In those days, he was not married and he was dating different people, and he would bring over the most charming young women and we’d have a lot of fun with them.” But Doris also recalled that EMK worked hard, too: “whenever he would come over or whenever we’d see him, he always had a briefcase…. Everything went into the briefcase, and he had it with him and he studied it. We could have fun that night, but the next morning he was taking care of his business and making the phone calls or recalling what we discussed that we were going to do.” (Clymer, p. 492; Hersh, p. 106; Canellos, p. 286)

EMK speaks at the Democratic National Convention in New York, following a videotaped tribute to RFK. (Clymer, p. 514)

Fall  EMK and VK conduct a number of interviews to dispel rumors that the marriage was made simply to help EMK’s political career. During a luncheon for about a dozen of Boston’s most influential professional women VK wins over the group by revealing details about herself and about how her relationship with EMK developed. (Clymer, pp. 518-519; Hersh, p. 109; Canellos, p. 306)

VK takes on a more active role in EMK’s political life. She becomes his most trusted political advisor and sounding board. EMK regularly includes VK in staff strategy sessions, and she routinely accompanies him to important events. At the same time, she imposes more structure on EMK’s personal life and begins to take charge of Kennedy family matters as well. (Canellos, p. 307)

Important issues EMK works on this year include national health care, NIH reauthorization, family and medical leave, abortion access, Stephen Breyer nomination to the Supreme Court, and national service legislation.

(Clymer, pp. 520-521)

October

December

EMK and VK travel to Ireland to visit with Jean Kennedy Smith. They discuss the possibility of issuing a visa for Gerry Adams, head of Sinn Fein, the political arm of the Irish Republican Army, to travel to the United States. EMK is initially hesitant to support this initiative, calling Adams “a terrorist.” But VK cautions him against making a hasty decision about the visa and counsels him to hear what his sister has to say. Kennedy Smith arranges meetings with author Tim Pat Coogan and Irish Prime Minister Albert Reynolds to help persuade him that this is a wise course of action. Reynolds explains to EMK that the idea behind extending a visa to Adams is to demonstrate to him and the IRA that they could advance their cause without violence. In order to move the Irish Republicans toward peace, Reynolds tells EMK that “he’s [Adams is] our best hope.” (Clymer, pp. 536-537; Maier, pp. 572-579)

Important issues EMK works on this year include the Elementary and Secondary Education Act Reauthorization, the Goals 2000: Educate America Act, the Clinton health care plan, and abortion clinic access legislation.

January

On the 2\textsuperscript{nd}, EMK leaves Ireland still undecided about the Gerry Adams visa. Shortly thereafter, EMK speaks to Northern Ireland political leader John Hume at Tip O’Neill’s funeral, and the Irish politician convinces EMK that granting Adams the visa is the right course of action. EMK begins to rally support for Adams, and when Adams applies for the visa on the 14\textsuperscript{th} EMK sends a letter to President Clinton arguing, “It is important for the United States to facilitate the emerging dialogue as an alternative to violence.” Thirteen other Senators and twenty-eight representatives also sign the letter. The State Department, the U.S. Embassy in London, the British government, and officers in Kennedy Smith’s own embassy in Dublin oppose the visa. Clinton overrules them and grants Adams a forty-eight hour visa. (Clymer, pp. 536-537, 520)

February

Mitt Romney announces he will run for EMK’s senate seat. Radio talk show host Janet Jeghelian, 1982 gubernatorial candidate John R. Lakian, Gary Todd, a central Massachusetts radio salesman, and James Darwin Carter, a Georgia native who raised over one million dollars through a national direct-mail effort, have also expressed an interest in challenging EMK.

Spring

At VK’s urging, the EMK campaign investigates Romney’s business. (Kennedy, \textit{True Compass}, p. 441; Clymer, p. 550)

Caroline Raclin makes her first communion. EMK gives her the rosary that the Pope had given him fifty-five years before. (Clymer, p. 534)

May

Jackie Kennedy Onassis dies in her home in New York with Caroline Kennedy and JFK, Jr., at her side. EMK and VK visit her that day and are on a plane back to Washington when she dies. EMK delivers a eulogy at the funeral at St. Ignatius Loyola Church in New York. He says she was a “magnificent wife, mother, grandmother, sister, aunt, and friend.” “Her two children turned out to be extraordinary, honest, unspoiled, and with a character equal to hers.” She is buried next to JFK in Arlington National Cemetery. (Clymer, p. 542)

A survey suggests over 60 percent of Massachusetts respondents think EMK should not run for reelection. (\textit{The Guardian}, 09/12/1994)

Romney wins a substantial victory at the Republican State Party Convention. John Lakian, who cleared the 15 percent threshold of convention delegates, will also appear on the primary ballot in September. The other candidates fail to reach the 15 percent mark. (The Boston Globe, 05/16/1994)

June
EMK criticizes Romney for not being involved in important issues such as gun control and abortion. (The Boston Herald, 06/04/1994)

Romney challenges EMK to a series of debates. (The Boston Herald, 06/02/1994)

July
VK resigns from her law firm over its decision to represent Libya in a wrongful death suit filed by the family of a victim of the 1988 bombing of Pan Am flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland. (The Boston Globe, 07/21/1994)

August
The IRA agrees to a ceasefire, but under the condition that the U.S. grants a visa to Joe Cahill, an IRA activist and convicted terrorist. The IRA leadership believes that only Cahill has the standing to persuade hard-line supporters that this is the right course of action. While vacationing in France, Kennedy Smith is contacted by Reynolds who apprises her of the situation. Kennedy Smith then returns to Dublin, and repeatedly calls Clinton, urging him to grant the visa. She also convinces EMK to lobby the President. Before making a decision, Clinton once again contacts Reynolds who assures him that this will result in a “complete cessation” of violence. Clinton agrees to authorize Cahill’s entry and the ceasefire is announced within hours. (Clymer, p. 548; O’Clery, pp. 155-157; The Washington Post, 08/31/1995; The Irish Times, 03/09/1996)

Romney launches a series of ads focusing on welfare, healthcare and crime. Two weeks later, EMK’s pollster finds that Romney has gained over ten points. Near the end of the month, EMK airs an ad on his role in passing the crime bill. Romney counters with an ad mocking the idea of EMK as tough on crime. (The Boston Globe, 11/10/1994; The Boston Herald, 08/03/1994)

September
Joseph Kennedy II (JPK II) runs a column in The Boston Herald criticizing Mormons. He charges that Mormons treated African-Americans and women as “second-class citizens.” Despite his June promise not to raise the issue of religion—Romney is a Mormon—EMK says it is proper to ask Romney about the issue of blacks in the church. Romney asks EMK to repudiate the statements. Michael Kennedy, JPK II’s brother, responds that he had “never been able to control my brother, but I would not deny him either.” EMK later issues an apology. (Clymer, pp. 550-551; The Nation, 10/14/1994)

Adams travels to the U.S. for a second time, and EMK and VK greet him at the airport in Boston. This event is interpreted as a signal that Adams is now acceptable to moderate Irish-Americans. While in Washington, Adams spends a night as a guest at Hickory Hill, the home of Ethel Kennedy. Traveling around the country, Adams is treated as a celebrity; however, he is not permitted to visit the White House or to have contact with high-ranking officials. EMK lobbies for Adams, having a reportedly “angry” phone call with National Security Adviser
Tony Lake. The White House eventually caves into the pressure. Vice President Al Gore calls Adams and informs him that the ban on American officials having contact with Sinn Fein has been rescinded. (O’Clery, pp. 168-175)

EMK’s ex-wife, Joan Kennedy, announces that she plans to reopen her divorce settlement with EMK. She hires one of Boston’s toughest divorce lawyers, Monroe Inker, and takes EMK to court on the 6th. (Clymer, p. 550; The Boston Globe, 11/10/1994)

On the 18th, EMK holds a campaign meeting to discuss how to deal with Romney who is expected to win the Republican nomination. In attendance are EMK, VK, Edmund Reggie, John Sasso, Bob Shrum, and Kennedy pollster Tom Kiley. (The Boston Globe, 11/10/1994)

Romney wins the Republican state primary on the 20th defeating John Lakian. EMK is unopposed for the Democratic nomination. Romney pulls even with EMK in the polls. (The Boston Globe, 09/21/94, 11/10/1994)

Both President Clinton and Hillary Clinton appear at fundraisers for EMK. (Clymer, p. 553)

The EMK campaign interviews Ampad workers on strike from a plant in Marion, Indiana, and produces ads depicting Romney as a heartless businessman. Although currently on a leave of absence, Romney is chairman of the company that owns Ampad. The commercials are effective in driving up Romney’s negative ratings. (The Boston Globe, 11/10/1994)

EMK and VK host a series of gatherings at their Boston apartment for supporters, and VK appears in television ads for the campaign. “I reject strongly the label of my husband as a womanizer,” VK explains. “I know the tremendous respect he has for me, and for his daughters, and for his mother. I think that says it all.” VK later says that she loves campaigning. “People are so warm and so open and talk to me about the difference Ted has made in their lives, or talk to me about the concerns in their lives. It’s wonderful. I love it.” She is seen as a great political asset by EMK and others. (The New York Times, 09/24/1994; Kennedy, True Compass, pp. 440-444; Canelllos, pp. 297-298; EMK and Vicki Kennedy interview with Natalie Jacobson, JFK Library, 10/29/1994)

October

Joan Kennedy announces that she will wait to reopen her divorce settlement with EMK until after the November election. (The New York Times, 10/06/1994)

An invitation-only rally at Faneuil Hall marks a new start for EMK’s campaign in which former Democratic National Committee chairman Paul Kirk and EMK’s former chiefs of staff David Burke and Ranny Cooper take over from Michael Kennedy. Burke serves as EMK’s “body man,” traveling with EMK on the campaign trail. VK campaigns on her own but rejoins EMK and Burke every night. (Kennedy, True Compass, pp. 440; The Nation, 10/14/1994)

In their first debate at Faneuil Hall, Romney pits his “skill and experience in the private sector” against EMK’s seniority in the Senate to argue that he knows how to create jobs better than EMK. EMK gets Romney to concede that he does not know how much his plans for health care would cost, and accuses Romney of not giving medical care to part-time workers he employs. Romney counters with similar accusations about employees at the Kennedy’s Merchandise Mart in Chicago. Romney also charges that EMK is “soft on crime.” Commentators call the debate a draw. (The New York Times, 10/26/1994)

In a second debate in Holyoke, Romney promises to oppose increasing taxes and spending, though he separates himself from other Republicans by saying he does not support cutting money for student loans or reducing the federal tax on capital gains. EMK emphasizes his accomplishments and his ability to build coalitions, which he plans to do next for health care legislation. He also challenges Romney on where he stands on the issue of banning cheap handguns. A telephone survey completed before the debate finds EMK leading 52 to 38 percent. (The New York Times, 10/28/1994)

On the 29th, EMK and VK are interviewed on Boston television. In his reply to a question about whether he had been lonely before meeting VK, EMK says: “Probably. I don’t think I probably knew how lonely I was until I met Vicki. I had no idea of ever having a serious relationship like this in my life. And all of that went aside when I met her, and she became a part of my life.” (Clymer, p. 543)

November

Patrick Kennedy is elected to the U.S. House of Representatives from Rhode Island’s 1st District, where he still currently serves. EMK and Patrick Kennedy establish a routine of meeting for lunch every Tuesday when both are in town. (Clymer, p. 559, 577; http://www.house.gov/patrickkennedy/congressman.html)

The GOP wins control of both the House and Senate in the “Republican Revolution.” EMK loses his chairmanship of the Labor Committee.
Kathleen Kennedy Townsend is elected Lieutenant Governor of Maryland, becoming the first Kennedy woman elected to public office. She is reelected in 1998. (“The Kennedys,” American Experience)

1995

Important issues EMK works on in 1995 include the minimum wage, budget reconciliation (EMK tries to restore funding for education and limit spending reductions), and health insurance portability.

January

Rose Kennedy dies from complications of pneumonia on the 22nd, just a few months short of her 105th birthday. EMK, Patricia Kennedy Lawford, Jean Kennedy Smith, and Eunice Kennedy Shriver had gathered in Hyannis Port to be with Rose Kennedy during her final days. Rose Kennedy’s funeral service is held at St. Stephen’s Church in the North End of Boston, where she had been baptized in 1890. EMK and VK both speak at the service and EMK gives the eulogy. Rose Kennedy is buried next to JPK at Holyhood Cemetery. EMK’s nephew Douglas Kennedy later recalls how attentive EMK was to his mother at the Cape: “Every morning he would structure his day around her. He was constantly talking to her. Tell her the whole story of the day, in a jolly, gregarious way, and he is describing to her what happened. That made me as proud of being a member of this family as anything.” EMK honors her memory by going to mass everyday for a year. (Clymer, pp. 562-564; Canellos, p. 309)

Winter

Adams applies for another visa to visit the U.S. around St. Patrick’s Day, which presents a dilemma: should he be invited to the annual lunch with the President and Taoiseach? The British government adamantly maintains that Adams not be permitted to fundraise and that he should be excluded from the lunch. EMK and Senator Christopher Dodd (D-CT) send a letter to Clinton arguing that Adams should be able to raise funds in the U.S. and that unilateral conditions, such as decommissioning of weapons by the IRA, are unfair. Kennedy Smith also phones the President and a number of congressmen pleading for Adams. Clinton opts to invite Adams to the lunch and to remove the ban on fundraising, precipitating a serious rift between Clinton and British Prime Minister John Major. (O’Clery, pp. 192-201)

November

EMK and Patrick Kennedy attend Israeli Prime Minister Rabin’s funeral and sprinkle dirt from EMK’s brothers’ graves onto Rabin’s. (Clymer, p. 578)

February

EMK and VK sell their home in McLean, Virginia. They rent a house in northwest Washington, D.C. until 1998, when they buy a house in the Kalorama embassy area. (Clymer, p. 592)

March

Roger Tamraz, a Lebanese oil financier at the center of the Democratic fund-raising scandal surrounding the 1996 election, discloses that he was a fund-raiser for EMK, sought his help on an oil pipeline deal, and had hired VK to help him with some legal matters. EMK’s Senate office denies there is any conflict of interest. (The Boston Globe, 03/21/1997)

January

EMK and VK, as well as Trina Vargo, Kathy McKiernan, and Chris Doherty, travel to Northern Ireland. EMK meets with Protestant UUP leader David Trimble in Northern Ireland to discuss the stalled peace talks. The Good Friday Agreement is reached later that spring. (Clymer, p. 594)
